

Genes & Environment Best Paper Award

1. The Japanese Environmental Mutagen Society (JEMS) bestows annually a “Best Paper Award” to a prominent paper published in the society’s journal, Genes and Environment.
2. This award aims to encourage young researchers to contribute to JEMS and to the society’s journal, Genes and Environment.
3. One paper among those published in the preceding year can receive the award, and all of the authors (excluding non-JEMS members) will be awarded.
4. Award selection is done by the end of March of each year, and the winning authors will be awarded a diploma at the annual meeting of JEMS by the President of JEMS.
